

ECONOMICS (EC)

EC 5615 Global Economics (3)

The national economies today are all deeply embedded in an interactive global network with profound implications for both economic theory and economic policy. In this course, students will engage in theoretical as well as empirical studies of international economic relationships.